

From: Ray Bowditch [mailto:rbowditch@bowditch.net]

Sent: Wednesday, April 29, 2009 9:51 AM

To: EBSA, E-OHPSCA - EBSA

Subject:

Most employees are honest. However there are a few who continue to have poorly defined physical illnesses, and physicians are reluctant to question their actual existence. The existence of some mental illness will be even more difficult to ascertain, and much easier to fake should an employee simply not want to come to work for an extended period.

We all can remember developing a very convenient stomach ache during our elementary school days.